*CSA = Community Supported Agriculture

The CSA Philosophy

MoonShadow Farm operates under the Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) model. CSA is a social model that connects you to your food, the land, and those that tend the soil. CSA is an economic model that allows you to place your food dollars directly in the hands of a family farm, one that assures they use organic practices. Organic agriculture respects the health and nutritional value of your food while being friendly to our environment.

The CSA philosophy creates a food system that adopts practices that emphasize flavor, nutrition, local economy and respect for the land.

There are numerous benefits of a CSA based food system. Besides providing fresh, organically grown produce, a CSA farm provides the non-farmer with an understanding of the challenges and rewards of farming. Members participate in the risks and uncertainties of farming as well as the rewards of a bountiful harvest. Having direct contact with the land can be a spiritually and physically rewarding experience. Family farmers can survive because of a guaranteed market that includes a dedicated community of loyal customers, a steady income, and the freedom to experiment with new varieties and techniques. Belonging to MoonShadow Farm benefits you, your family, the local economy and the environment. Congratulations!
